Third Edition

BILD Code of Practice

for the use and reduction of restrictive physical interventions

Around half of all people with learning disabilities and challenging behaviour are subject to physical interventions. High quality training, to increase staff skills and confidence and reduce injuries among staff and people who use services, is therefore critical.

The BILD Code of Practice provides guidance for trainers and commissioners of training who support adults and children with:

- a learning disability
- an autistic spectrum condition
- special educational needs
- behavioural, emotional and social difficulties

This third edition has been substantially revised and updated and provides an important point of reference for commissioners of services, those with responsibility for implementing standards as well as families, carers and all who are involved in supporting people who may be exposed to the use of restrictive physical interventions.
