General Approach to Teaching Physical Interventions:

PROACT-SCIPr-UK® is an evidence and values-based 'whole person approach' to the support of individuals whose behaviour may be of concern and, in turn, can restrict their quality of life and independence.

The approach emphasises the importance of Person-Centred Planning, Positive Behaviour Support and proactive strategies based upon an individual's needs, characteristics and preferences. This positive approach gives the individuals independence and self-control which enables them to live a more fulfilling life.

Organisations are encouraged to develop a whole organisational approach to the provision of support with three core elements: Proactive, Active and Reactive Strategies. Those attending receive training in all three areas, including Audit-Based interventions where required. All training is based upon an individual Training Needs Analysis which takes into account the Education Health and Care Plans and / or Behaviour Support Plans of the individuals supported.
