

Ethical Approaches to Physical Interventions – changing the agenda

Seminar and book launch:

Wednesday 14 October 2009 – BILD Offices, Kidderminster, Worcestershire

Reducing restrictive practice and promoting positive support for people whose behaviour organisations find challenging

Ethical Approaches to Physical Interventions – changing the agenda

This event will officially launch a new publication Ethical Approaches to Physical Interventions Volume II. This is a key event in BILD's work in the field of positive behaviour support.

In May 2009 BILD launched its new Positive Behaviour Support Mission and this event will ensure the vision and work continues to move forward. With an opening keynote from Professor David Allen, a leading researcher and practitioner in the field, this event is not to be missed by any professional with an interest in this field of work.

All delegates will receive a complimentary copy of the new publication and have an opportunity to hear from four of the contributing authors. There will be an opportunity to discuss and debate aspects of the publication.

Who should attend

The event will be relevant to a range of professionals and others working in the field of positive behaviour support and intellectual disability. Teachers, nurses, doctors, psychologists, social workers and allied professionals who support people with intellectual disabilities will also find this event of particular interest. The event will be particularly relevant to trainers who deliver training in restrictive physical interventions.

Aims

- Explain the BILD Mission
- Enable delegates to hear from authors of a major new publication

- Allow discussion around research and an evidence base for practice
- Promote positive behaviour support
- Enable delegates to access new information

BILD's quality commitment

- We are committed to promoting good practice in services through the provision of high quality and best value information and training.
- To enhance the learning experience and complement the learning materials, we will make relevant BILD publications available for purchase as part of the event.
