General Information:

Autism-friendly screenings are for people with autism and their friends or family. People with other learning or sensory disabilities are welcome to attend the screenings too.

Because of sensory sensitivities to sound and light some children and adults can find going to the cinema difficult. They may disturb other cinemagoers by making noise or needing to go out for a break.

For autism-friendly screenings the soundtrack is turned down a little and low lights are left on in the auditorium. If anyone makes noise or moves around that is absolutely fine.

After the screenings there will be free tea, coffee, juice and biscuits. This time is a chance to chat to other people who live with autism and to pass any comments on to cinema staff.
