

Announcing a NEW Literacy and Life Skills publishing programme for young people with special needs

SEN Press is a new publishing house focusing solely on special needs education. It is launching in May 2006 with ten titles, all written by experienced authors, all dealing with everyday experiences within the experience of young people aged 14-19, working at around Level 1. Further titles will be published later in 2006 and into 2007. (Please turn over for full title details.)

Publisher Peter Clarke brings a wealth of professional, personal and business experience to special needs publishing. He has taught in the fields of special education and literacy for twenty years and is a published author in this field. His son Adam, now 20, has Down's Syndrome, and Peter has not only taken an active role in his development, but has also been a governor of his school for many years.

These highly-acclaimed titles make ideal introductions to key Life Skills and Social Skills topics, and support key teaching objectives of the main accredited SEN Life Skills courses:

- Age-appropriate
- Reading age 6.5 to 7 years
- 16pp/24pp, 200-500 words
- Clear, detailed colour illustrations

ASDAN

Endorsed by ASDAN

The new books have been extensively trialled in special schools, and have been very well received. Heather Fry, Head of Special Needs and Entry Level Development at ASDAN has welcomed them enthusiastically: "These books are excellent. Reading material on everyday events within these young people's experience is very hard to find. These are very useful indeed. They will certainly be recommended for ASDAN courses."

Praised by teachers

These are typical comments from teachers who have worked with the first SEN Press titles:

“ These books can be used in many ways... A fabulous resource ”

Jayne Cowdale, Co-ordinator 14-19, Penn Hall School, Wolverhampton

“ My Year 10 and 11 students and I were impressed with the books and thoroughly enjoyed them. Well done! ”

Veronica Buttigieg, Literacy Co-ordinator, Lancaster School, Westcliff-on-Sea

“ The stories certainly captivate my KS4 students... I have been so impressed with them. Big congratulations! ”

Sophia England, Senior Teacher, Charlton School, London SE7

“ Very appropriate for students with ASD, particularly as the narrative consists of real situations and the illustrations are real representations of real people. ”

Angela Banner, teacher of children with Autism and Deputy Head, Broadfields Special School

“ It's good to see that resources are being developed for the older age group. Dyslexics will also be able to enjoy reading them. ”

Liz Tredget, Regional Development Officer(SE and London), British Dyslexia Association
