

How we will make and do our training:

Bild will make sure we stick to the values of the Oliver McGowan Mandatory Training Trials.

We will make sure that our training trial uses the right research and the best ways to make and do our training. This will mean that there is real and positive change in people's lives.

Who is part of our training trial?

We will listen to lots of different people when we do our training. We will work with people who know lots about the training subjects.

We will be working with lots of experts by experience including:

- People with learning disabilities
- Autistic people
- People with learning disabilities and autism
- Family and parent carers of people with learning disabilities and/or autistic people

We want to get this right.

How will we make our training?

We are making our training materials in different working groups.

In each working group half of the people will have lived experience.

Everyone will know lots about the subjects that they are working on.

How will we do our training?

All of our training will have some parts that are face to face. Face to face might mean on a computer or in a classroom.

All of our training will have two trainers, one with lived experience and one who knows a lot about the subject through their work.

This is a really important chance for us to improve the lives of people with learning disabilities, autistic people and people with learning disabilities and autism. We will try our hardest to get this right.

We are learning about how to work with people as part of the trial. We might not get it right first time but we will always try to make it better.

If you have any questions about how we will co-produce Oliver McGowan Mandatory Training Trials, please contact Lindsey Allen at l.allen@bild.org.uk